

Women's Health Grampians builds support against family violence

WOMEN'S Health Grampians has made a meaningful contribution to the lives of at-risk women.

The organisation raised $750 at the "Leading Change" lunch for WRISC Family Violence Support while discussing the underlying causes of violence against women and how they can be addressed.

donation would help the cause.

"We believe that everyone has the right to be safe,"

she said.

"(This money) will be used to support our programs that assist many women and children who are victims of family violence in the Ballarat region."

Women's Health Grampians Act@Work project manager Michelle Hunt said acting on family violence was important.

"As the incidence of violence against women continues to increase in our region, we all need to consider what role we can play," she said.

"We want more businesses in the region to take responsibility in this area."

WRISC executive officer Elizabeth Jewson said the